

Mural #6: Volleyball in Hermosa

Location: 13th & Beach Drive, West Facing Wall

ABOUT THE ARTIST:

Bo Bridges

is a professional sport & lifestyle photographer. His passion for adventure drives the dynamic imagery he produces and his ability to capture top level action and true human emotion with such unique perspective and detail is what has earned him a spot among the world's top photographers. Bo is constantly pushing the boundaries of what it takes to get the perfect shot. Most recently, Bo found himself hanging out of the side of a plane while shooting Tom Cruise dangling from the aircraft to capture the movie poster for Paramount Picture's Mission Impossible: Rogue Nation film. Having traveled to over 35 countries, Bo takes the time to capture the beauty of each location along the way. The compelling scenes from his world travels can be found at his Bo Bridges Gallery in Manhattan Beach, California. Bo's shot was featured on the November issue of SURFER Magazine.

ABOUT THE MURAL:

In Hermosa Beach in the late 1920's the first sand court was built in the front yard of a house on 19th Street. Later courts were established at the Shattuck house at 9th Street, and at the corner of 23rd and The Strand. There were often notorious competitions between the players from these courts. This mural depicts an expanse of sand with a high-flying woman player hitting the ball!
